With reference to the comments which were

recently made in this paper upon the question of the importation of Chinese labour into England-or rather upon the importation of all foreign labour, as the arguments applicable to Chinese labourers are precisely the same as those which apply to other foreigners-we find an article in the Examiner which is of much interest as showing the species of argument which is being used at home upon this important subject. Under the heading "Free Trade in labour" the above paper, after setting forth the main facts connected with the Newcastle strike and condemning the importation of foreign labourers. of fact, as is frequently the case in speculation of this kind, two questions, which though intimately connected are essentially different in their nature, are mixed up. The question of labour and that of the labourer are distinct. It must be obviously to the advantage of any given State that labour should be cheap; but it may be to its detriment that labouring men should be underpaid and that poverty among them should be allowed to spread unchecked. The question at issue may thus be stated in the following form. Is it possible to obtain the benefits of cheap labour without incurring the disadvantage of depriving our labouring men of sufficient to support them in a fair degree of comfort; if the labouring classes would be deprived to some extent of the amount of wages which would accrue to them were foreign labour not in troduced, would this not be more than counterbalanced by the general cheapness of commodities which must ensue from got off the rocks. No attempt had been yet general cheapness of labour; and, lastly, is it not more easy to the country at large and more beneficial to the workmen, to find a re- | was that the pin of the mooring chain coming mody for any inconvenience which may result to them from the importation of foreign labour than to attempt to prevent cheap labour

The two first questions may fairly be answered together. That the advent of foreign labour would reduce wages and thereby tend to cause at least temporary distress there can natives were paying 2 taels per day per mille. be no doubt; but we cannot ignore that or at the rate of 73 per cent. per aunum. Letagainst this we have to set an immense advantage to be reaped in the increase of the wealth of the country; and, in this, the labouring man would share in common with other people. But while anxious to obtain the them in a week or ten days. The amount to be cheap labour, the state cannot entirely ignore | returned was estimated at 24 million taels, so | the labourer, and if he feels bound to leave movements of commerce unshackled, but knows that by so doing much distress must at least for a time accrue to very large and important classes-the labouring classes, who in fact form the backbone of the nation-it is its business to aid them in meeting the difficulties, or to teach them how they can best do so themselves; but it cannot be as sumed that the Government is to interfere with the working of supply and demand in the labour market for the protection either of master or man. In old times the error was made of imagining that the Government was justified in interfering for the benefit of the former. The enlightened views of modern days have fortunately put an end to this clothes and boots. fallacy, and any idea of coercing labouring men or of treating them before the laws differently to other classes have long ago been abandoned. The only result in the long run of endeavouring to keep up the familiar illustration, that the Goose which for similar offences. lays the Golden eggs will be killed; and that though the foreign labourers may be excluded from working in England they will not be prevented from doing so elsewhere, and, as a consequence, we shall soon find ourselves unable to compete with other nations in the night, 9th Nov., at about 8 p.m., he arrested, served better of their follow-residents than manufactures upon the sale of which the prosperity of the working man ultimately Deane. What has become of the Hongkong Amaeur Dramatic Corps? Some two months ago, rumour had it that they intended to do | (this day.) enormous things, and to produce some pieces which would quite astonish the Community; but although we are now well in to the cool weather we have heard nothing further as to their doings. We understand that they have some little difficulty to contend against in consequence of the loss of some of their more talented members; but still they might find it convenient to do something before half the cool season has passed away.

TIENTSIN.

The Daily News correspondent under date of 30th ulto, states that the cold weather was rapidly setting in. The Chinese authorities were still parading the two soakes who were said to be gods of the water, but had taken no steps to prevent the inruption of the waters which were continuing to flow over the country in concerning Le-hung-chang, Governor-General that his family left on the 29th ulto. for Paouting-foo, which the inundation has never reached; and it is now commonly stated by the Chinese that Le-hung-chang himsel f will follow in a few days. Very soon after Lebung-chang had taken over the post of vernor-General be commenced building river gunboats, and before long he had completed over three hundred of them. They are from 45 to 50 feet long, and are each furnished with three or four small light cannon, carrying from two to three nound shot, and have crews of twelve to fifteen Southern Chinese; many of them ex-rebels, and mon of that stamp. What Le-bung chang's idea could be in providing himself with such a fleet in Chibli, and all manned with Southern men, one can only surmise; and the surmise of the Tientsin people is, that should any disturbanc arise at Tientsin, either with a Foreign Government or with the Tientsin people, the Governor-General could with safety, under the protection ris opponents. Of course in winter, with the rivers and canals all frozen, the fleet can be of no service for moving into the interior, is now generally said that he provides for is personal safety and that of his family for the winter by going at once, while the rivers and canals are open, to Paouting-foo, beyond he reach of foreign gunboats or native enemies. The Tientain population are highly amused at the care which his Excellency the brave Governor General is taking of himself and belonginge for the coming winter. He assuredly shows himself possessed of energy in this measure.

One of the Earl Dalhousie's ghillies at Invermark Lodge, replying the other day to an observation of his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh, said (taking off his cap at the same time,) "Please your righteousness!"

A NEGRO JURY.—The following is the States, and it expresses a hope that the union be brought, these people would not be render- withdrawn from the Bank. There was a good subsequently drowed and afterwards washed Vessels Advertised as Loading.

THE "ECONOMIST" ON THE RATE! OF DISCOUNT. The raising of the Bank rate from 2 to 3 per cent this week was a very unexpected event. In the best informed quarters on the previous day, at least until the very close, the opinion was that, though money was getting more and more in demand, yet the Bank was so strong Tong-kwoon merchant. that there would either be no rise for a week. or at most a very slight rise. On the Stock to Hongkong merchant. Exchange, where there has lately been a great deal of speculative buying, there was more apprehension of dearer money, but not much fear of so great a change. Still, the action of the Bank, though unexpected, is quite justified by the event, and the facts which have since become known. The demand for money, both at the Bank and in the open market, has by Kin-tai loong to Hongkong merchant. continued strong at the advanced rates. Possibly this is to some extent the result of procuutions on the part of the public, who may be over providing themselves; but so far as we can learn the current requirements are very large, and quite up to the supply of money. This demand is the best justification of the step which has been taken. To have continued to supply money at I per cent. less than the publie were willing to pay would only have suded after a little in a still more catastrophic change than what has occurred. The point which is most difficult to understand in connexion with the advance is the state of the Bank account. Since the rate was reduced to 2 per cent, in July, the Bank has not got much weaker, and it is still very strong. The liabilities in the Ranking department-On the 12th of July were £32,712,000, they now are £27,325,000; de- curation, crease, £5,387,000. The reserve, on the other hand, on the 12th of July was £16,646,000, it now is £13,711,00); decrease, £2,935,000. The absolute amount of the reserve has diminished, but relatively to the banking liabilities the Bank is rather better than it was when the rate was lowered. The stock of bullion in both departments, $23,507,000, though it is nearly three-and-u-bulf millione less than it was July, is nevertheless very large. In ordinary circumstances such a position of the Bank would have enabled it to stand a further strain upon its resources before it raised the rate. The circum-£1,300,000, and are now £17,781,000 obly a in our firm, which in future will consist of million less than they were in July, although the Bank's deposits are so much less. So large an increase in one week, with some prospect of its continuance, could not but excite ularm, coupled with the knowledge otherwise obtained that the reserve was immediately to be reduced by a drain of gold for export. There is some uncertainty as to how much gold was really booked to go away before the rate was raised; but the known German demand was so large, and was accompanied by so many minor demands, that the Bank directors might well have feared they would not be in time if they deferred advancing the rate a week. No barm is done by being alittle premature. There is naturally some anxiety after so sudden a change as to what the future of the money market will be. Of one point there can be no doubt. We shall probably not see 2 per cent, again for a good while to come. The present rise was preceded by a general advance in the German rates for money, and, as the demand has been a growing | admitted partners in our firm. one in England too for some time, we conclude that the period of 2 per cent, is for the present at an end. As we have lately remarked more than once, the Bankers' Clearing house Returns show that we are doing a large business. and the last Board of Trade Returns, making date. every allowance for the change in their form, confirm this. Our imports-In eight mouths of 1871 have been £215,510,000; in eight months of 1870 were £188,230,000. Increase $27.280,000. Our exports have also increased largely, especially of late. Our chief raw materials-wool, cotton, and corn-are likewise dear, and, owing to the deficient barvest, our corn imports are likely to be above the average. In addition, there is a fair amountof commitments in foreign loans during the next few months. In these circumstances, and with the usual autumn pressure before us, it is not likely that when the rate has LYALL & Co. to be raised in September it will go down again very soon. The doubtful point is whether the Bank minimum may not be put up again soon. On this head we can only say that the whole circumstances, as now disclosed, are such as to require some caution. We are still of opinion that the German demands must be nearly satisfied. M. Thiers stated last week in the As- firm of sembly that he had preferred making an arrangement about Aluce and Lorraine, as a means of securing the evacuation of additional Provinces, to a further payment of the indemnity for the same purpose, because the pay-ments already made had tried the money market to the utmost, and to pay more now would produce a serious disturbance in it. It is also to be considered on the same side that the continental exchanges, since the rate was put up, have turned rather more in our favour. Still the exact use which the German Government may make of its money power cannot be definitely foreseer, and, after what has occurred it will be judicious to wait a few days for the re-

A Marringe at El-Mesar. El-Keear contains about 9,000 inhabitants, s large proportion of whom are Jews. The town was in a state of great commotion when we a rived, as a few days previously a number of the large family of the Shercers or soi-disant descendants of the Prophet had arrived from Fez for the purpose of marrying the daughter of man of the town. The inhabitants of the neighbouring bills, a rather simple and primitive people, unfortunately having heard of the forthcoming event, arranged to offer some presonts, consisting of a few sheep and cattle, to the Shereef. These they sent by the hand of chosen deputies to the number of two thousand selected chiefly from the youth of the tribe, who in due time arrived at El-Kesar with the offerings, having also brought their arms in case of accidents. On entering the town the mountaineers proceeded to the house of the Shereef and duly presented their gifts, which were received with thanks and a highly complimentary. speech. The worthy fellows then commenced to make themselves at home. One party repaired to the gate of the town, where a kind of tax is collected in the form of a duty, levied on every camel or mule load passing in or out of the gateway. They entered the custom house established here, told the officials and soldiers in charge that their services were dispensed with, and allowed them to take their departure. after having been rather roughly hundled. They then proceeded to plunder the treasury of any ready cash they found there, which they divided among themselves, after which they established on their own account a gate duty like the former one, charging, bowever, only half the amount per load. A New Domesday Book.

(Law Times.) In his admirable speech on the land question Lord Derby suggested that, to supply materials for legislation, another Domesday Book should be a natracted, so as to show with accuracy what is the condition of landownership and mere attempt to secure it proves fatul. Old tenancy, upon which such wild assertions are men die not in harness, but from suddenly behazarded now even by grave politicians, whose assertions are purely imaginary, are taken by newspaper writers for truth, and arguments based upon them, which, in the present state of the grave alone are they capable of enjoying societ, with Communism ready to explode at any favourable moment, may lead to serious practical results.

It was stated by Mr J. S. Mill, as a reason for revolutionising the laws of property, that all the land of England was held by somewhat less than 40,000 proprietors. It is inexpressibly delightful for the busy man to find himself by the sea-side, or face to face with the beauties of nature, and the sense of contrast is for awhile sustaining; but that over, his inexpressible delight yields to his being inexpressibly bored. Thus, were it possible to get at the real sentiments of aummertourists, it would be found that in the majority of cases the engerness with which they set out is nothing in comparison to the alsority with
